Bc pnp registration guide

What is the provincial candidate program? Administered by the province of B.C. under an agreement with Immigration, Refugee and Citizenship Canada (IRCC), the BC Provincial Nominated Program (BC PNP) is the province's only direct economic immigration tool to bring new British Columbians. The program allows B.C. foreign workers, international students and a limited number of entrepreneurs willing to invest in skills and expertise to nominate with the need to develop the provincial economy. The BC ENABLES PNP nominees and their dependent family members to apply to the federal government for permanent residency in the provincial enrolled class. The Federal Government (IRCC) sets the number of nominees available under the PNP and is the ultimate selection authority for immigrants to Canada. What are the changes in BC PNP? Over the years, BC PNP has been changed to improve processing time for applicants, and ensuring the program meets B.C. labor market and economic development priorities. In early 2016, BC PNP introduced a new online registration system which allows B.C. to select the highest impact candidates, not just those in line before, allowing the province to ensure strong results. Registration is a points-based system that is similar to the expression of interest - registrants receive a score based on the information provided in the online system and the score determines whether they will be invited to apply. The score is based on six factors which are important indicators of how likely a person is to succeed in the labour market and contribute to the economy: skill level of BC job offer, wages, education, years of work experience, official language proficiency and area of employment. Who can apply? Foreign workers who have accepted a full-time, precarious job offer at BC may be eligible for one of the program's skill immigration and express entry BC categories: skilled workers, health care professionals, international graduates, entry levels and semi-skilled and northeast pilot project. BC PNP's International Post Graduate Categories job offers are exempt and need to complete selected programmes of study at post graduate level. Those interested in applying to bc pnp must first register a profile online. The BC PNP also has a specific category for express entry aspirants who are planning to work and stay in BC but do not currently hold enough marks under express entry to get invitation to apply. Applicants who have submitted express entry profile and are eligible for both express entry and BC PNP can submit an online profile through EEBC through BC PNP. If selected, the applicant can submit an application in BC PNP for nomination. On receipt of sanction, BC PNP will automatically add 600 points to the applicant's online express entry profile. The applicant then Admission will continue through the PR application process, but with a nomination from the province. The BC PNP has extended its tech pilot till June 2021. is. The tech pilot helps employers in BC quickly hire and support PR for foreign workers and international students in demand. Registrants enjoy weekly invitations to apply and prioritize reviews by BC PNP. The BCPNP is also continuously supporting the technical sector staff. BC PNP has selected 29 'in-demand' businesses that are eligible for tech pilots. A complete list can be found here. As of June 26, 2018, applicants eligible for tech pilot should have a job offer of at least one year (365 days) contrary to the regularly required offer of permanent employment. Job offers should have at least 120 days left at the time of application. Due to increased unemployment in some regions as a result of the COVID-19 epidemic, the BC PNP has temporarily suspended invitations to introduce individuals in 31 tourism, hospitality, retail and personal service businesses. The suspension is likely to remain in force through 2020. A complete list of businesses made out of invitation to apply is found here. Complete details about the BCNP program criteria are available in bcnpn skill immigration and express entry BC program guide. What is the procedure? Registration: International workers who have accepted a BC job offer can register at no cost. They can go bcnpn online, create a profile, complete a registration and get their score instantly. Invitation: From time to time, BC PNP invites the highest scoring registrants to apply for nominations. Those invited to apply have 30 days to submit an online application and pay the $1150 application processing fee. Note that the fee for applying was increased in August 2020. Registrants were not invited and those who do not apply within 30 days of being invited are removed from the pool after 12 months. Application: BC pnp will assess the applications against the programme and category specific criteria and select the candidates to become provincial nominees. Currently, the processing time is 2 - 3 months. Nominations: Approved, or nominated, will confirm enrollment and receive a work permit support letter, if necessary, which they may use to apply for a new work permit or extend one that will expire soon. Permanent Residence: After being nominated, provincial nominees and their dependent family members have up to 6 months to apply to IRCC for permanent residence. IRCC conducts safety and acceptance checks and makes final decisions about permanent residence. When will the applications be accepted? BCPNP issues invitations based on the annual allocation of provincial enrollment and the processing capacity of the program. Information about invitations to apply including invitation dates, number of invitations issued and minimum score by category is posted on BC PNP website. How many openings will there be? BC's quota or 'provincial enrollment allocation' federal is determined by . An allocation of 6,500 has been confirmed for 2020. What can I do when I work Expires before receiving positive notification from PNP on my application? BCPNP will not nominate an applicant if they are in Canada and out of position. If a foreign worker's work permit is near expiry, applicants must work with their employers who must apply for a labour market impact assessment (LMIA) and work permit, or LMI-exempt work permit, so that the applicant retains the position during the process of enrollment application. How can employers support their current workers with the BC PNP application process? The best thing an employer can do is to get acquainted with the program criteria by reviewing the BC PNP program guide available on the BC PNP website. This will help them understand the requirements of the program and their obligations as employers supporting the BC PNP application. Employers can also help their employees prepare and schedule language tests at the accredited language test center. While official language proficiency is not a requirement for all categories of BC PNP, it is a factor that can increase a person's registration score which in turn increases the employee's chances of receiving an invitation to apply. What are the processing times for bc pnp application? Most applications are reviewed and processed in 2-3 months. Check the BC PNP website for the most updated information about your current processing time. How does BC PNP work as a pathway to immigration? Foreign workers nominated by BC PNP are eligible to apply to IRCC for permanent residence for themselves and their dependent family members under the provincial nominated category. BC can also support the application of a nominee in IRCC for work permits with PNP work permits if they need to renew the expired work permit. How will the change benefit employers in the tourism and hospitality industry? The program could be a valuable tool for employers to recruit new international workers by maintaining their international workforce or supporting them to obtain permanent residency. BC PNP also continues to provide a pathway to entry-level in tourism businesses and permanent residency for semi-skilled workers. Where can I find more information about BC PNP?
